

OUR MANUFACTURING INTERESTS.

Liberal Inducements Offered by one of our Leading Citizens.

We are pleased to learn that one of our leading capitalists has purchased an interest in the patent "Clover and Grass Seed Gatherer," of Mr. Paul Dismuke, of Gallatin, Tennessee, and proposes to secure, if possible, to this city the benefits to flow from their manufacture. The gentleman referred to has written to Messrs. C. Aultman & Co., of Canton, Ohio, one of the largest manufacturers of agricultural implements in the United States, to inquire upon what conditions they will come to this city and engage in the manufacture of the "Clover and Grass Seed Gatherer," and other agricultural implements. As an inducement, Mr. Baxter has notified these gentlemen that they can have ten acres of ground lying on Deaderick's Creek, immediately north of the city—part of the Brookside farm, now owned by Mr. E. P. Bailey, upon such terms as they may see fit. This property, we are satisfied, can be had for substantially nothing, provided C. Aultman & Co. will build upon it shops for the manufacture of agricultural machines. In addition to the ground the gentlemen interested in this patent, and others ready to associate with them, will join Messrs. Aultman & Co. in subscribing stock to give to the company ample capital to prosecute their work upon an extended scale. Cornelius Aultman, the senior member of the firm, is personally known to us, and if our citizens can persuade him to interest himself in this work, it would be one of the most important and valuable acquisitions ever secured to this city. His income last year, most of which came from his large manufacturing interests, amounted to $100,000. He is the senior member and principal owner of the larger shops at Canton, Mansfield and Akron, Ohio, and in all his establishments builds and sells, every year, some 12,000 reapers and mowers, and 3,000 threshing machines. In all his shops he employs over 3,000 mechanics. The celebrated agricultural works of Russell & Co., at Massillon, Ohio, alone build 3,500 reapers and mowers, and 1,500 threshers, and their machines are universally known from Australia to California and Oregon, as among the very best made. These gentlemen are all practical manufacturers and experienced business men, and if Col. Baxter succeeds in inducing either of them to embark in their line of manufacturing in this city, it will be the beginning of an interest which will bring to us within the next five years hundreds of skilled mechanics and thousands of capital. The county of Stark, in Ohio, contains the three large cities of Massillon, Canton and Alliance—cities built up and sustained almost entirely by their manufacturing establishments. They offer no advantages superior to Knoxville, save those presented through the enterprise and liberality of their citizens. The ten acres of ground offered by Col. Baxter lie along the track of the Knoxville and Kentucky Railroad, just outside the corporate limits of the city and afford a very fine situation for such an establishment. In addition to this ground, Mr. Baxter will subscribe stock, and give, on reasonable terms, to the establishment all privileges that can arise from the machine in question—which has been described as one of practical merits. This, now, is a move in the right direction, and looks like business. We hope others of our prominent capitalists will second this liberal offer, and assist in presenting to Messrs. Aultman & Co. such inducements as will secure to Knoxville the benefit of their extensive reputation, business capacity and ample resources.

We offer fine advantages to any such enterprise, now, and all we need to secure it is prompt action on the part of our men of capital and influence. The ball is rolling, who will help keep it moving?

LETTER FROM CLINTON.

CLINTON, TENN., June 25, 1870.

Dear Chronicle—Since my last, we have had quite a sensation in our town. That sensation came in the shape of small-pox. It is said that it came here from Campbell county, where it is prevailing to some extent, at this time, or was on the last report. You may imagine the consternation that pervaded our village when the unwelcome news first spread. Business, for the time, was suspended, the country people being afraid to come to town, and the citizens of the village seeming to suddenly discover something very attractive at home which demanded their immediate attention. Even the grocery corner, that prominent feature of our town, seemed almost deserted. Now and then a lugubrious-faced passenger would be seen standing wistfully upon the corners for a few minutes, and then would disappear. In fact the conclusion arrived at by the thinking part of our community, was that the Clintonians (the sick excepted) were "resting from their labors." (?) fully expecting their works (and the small-pox) to follow them. After about a week of domestication, which some of our worthy citizens really needed in order to become acquainted with their families, the excitement abated somewhat. Veteran loafers, whose rubicund faces are one of our corner institution, might be seen shaking each other cordially by the hand, and congratulating on their escape, just as I have imagined sailors recovered from a wreck, or soldiers coming out of a battle. The merchants' faces no longer reminded one of a yard-stick. Business again commenced on the corner, and trade generally seemed working up with new animation for its slight repose. But now comes the richest part of the story. After all this excitement; after Esquire Cross had been summoned to make sanitary provision, "as the law directs;" after every sinner had solemnly taken himself to his home, and perchance had rubbed a shameful amount of dust from the lids of his Bible; after every house, where there was any sickness, had been adorned, not with black crape, black with a red flag, and everybody had settled down on the conclusion that we were going to have quite a time with the small-pox; then it was concluded that the majority of the cases were nothing but measles. It is now very doubtful whether there has been more than one case of small-pox in the town, and it is said by some that his is only a case of scarletoid.

I suppose that most of our citizens are glad that they have not had it, but I confess that I am dubious whether to be glad that I have escaped, or mad that I have had so much trouble for nothing, but I rather think I am.

One more item of minor importance. During our excitement we forgot to read the news. It was rumored on our streets, just at the outbreak of the epidemic, that our present Legislature was about to cut the Gordian knot which is holding Cuba in "durance vile," by hitching it on to the southeast corner of Anderson county. Any verbal or written information on this subject will be thankfully received by Restricts.

THE INCOME TAX IN NEW YORK.—Superintendent Dutcher reports to the Revenue Bureau some facts about the income tax in New York. In the Second District, comprising Brooklyn and New York city, the total increase for this year has been $221,665. The Eighth District shows a falling off of $319,874; the First, $25,000, and the Twelfth, $24,000. The increase in the remaining Districts make up the deficiency. The income tax from the Twelfth District for the year will amount to $6,718,230. A. T. Stewart does not return $900,000 income, while Claflin, Mellen & Co., and hundreds of other large houses, show but small profits. Thousands of merchants swear to losses for the year. Mr. Dutcher says it has been a terrible year for the merchant prices as well as the small traders. —New York Times.

CAMPAIGN RATES.

SEND IN THE NAMES!

In view of the importance of the approaching Judicial and Congressional elections, and of the scarcity of money in the country, and desiring to place the WEEKLY CHRONICLE within the reach of every voter in East Tennessee, we have decided to make CAMPAIGN RATES for the DAILY AND WEEKLY CHRONICLE.

We will send the WEEKLY CHRONICLE from this date until after the Congressional election next November, to any subscriber, by mail or as otherwise ordered, for the sum of Fifty Cents, cash in advance. This is certainly cheap enough, and should induce our friends in every district and county of East Tennessee to make prompt efforts to see that our paper reaches every family in East Tennessee.

We urge our friends everywhere to go to work and secure us subscribers at once. Send us the name, accompanied with the money—FIFTY CENTS for each name—and we will see that the paper is promptly forwarded.

We are publishing a weekly containing more reading matter than any paper published in East Tennessee, and it will be our aim, during the coming campaign, to make it an efficient paper in the interests of the Republican party.

We will send the DAILY CHRONICLE for the same time for Two Dollars. Our daily contains more reading matter than any daily printed in East Tennessee.

We publish special dispatches from Nashville and elsewhere, giving the very latest news, and we shall spare neither labor nor expense to make it a live, interesting and efficient paper.

We hope our friends will go to work promptly in every county, and get up as many names as possible.

SEND IN THE NAMES!

OUR CAMPAIGN RATES.

We are very glad to state to our friends that, thus far, our efforts to make the CHRONICLE an interesting and acceptable paper have met with unprecedented success. We do not think a paper was ever begun under more favorable auspices than have surrounded the CHRONICLE. We make these statements not in a boastful way, but because we know them to be true. But in view of the importance of the approaching Judicial and Congressional elections, and desiring to place the DAILY CHRONICLE within the reach of every voter having the advantages of the daily mails, we have concluded to offer our DAILY from now until after the Congressional election, next November, for the sum of TWO DOLLARS. This is lower than our daily rates, and we adopt it only during the campaigns now near at hand. The sum is so small that most of our friends can well afford it, and we hope they will respond to our offer by sending us promptly every name they can, accompanied with the cash—two dollars.

We offer the WEEKLY CHRONICLE for the same time at the small sum of fifty cents.

TENNESSEE ITEMS.

Gen. E. Kirby Smith is in Nashville. Nashville is again excited on the subject of immigration.
